

Cactus (仙人掌): a learning piece of information

The Cactus, a western herb grown in the Museum, is satisfied with little water, but don't let it dry out completely. It needs moderately fertilized soil to grow and feels well in a very bright and warm place. The Cactus grows slowly, so please be patient. It needs many weeks to reach its final size and if you take good care of it, it can create a beautiful flower periodically.

This is how the Cactus may grow if you take good care of it:

You must not forget to water your plant regularly:

You also need to fertilize your plant:

The Cactus is available in these beautiful colors:
